

Students graduating with a Human Development BA will be able to:

Demonstrate core knowledge in biological, psychological, and socio-cultural aspects of human development. (ILO6)

Model critical thinking ability by summarizing, comparing, synthesizing, and critiquing interdisciplinary human development perspectives. (ILO1)

Assess information; design and conduct individual and/or group research projects, and present them clearly, logically, and persuasively. (ILO2)

Identify and evaluate problems by applying human development knowledge in diverse contexts. (ILO3)

Infer the ability to understand themselves reflectively and others empathetically. (ILO3)

With the permission of AD Sarah Neilsen, the HDEV faculty decided to assess our existing PLOs to determine whether they reflected

: Examination of existing PLOs.

The faculty assessed each PLO for diversity and cultural inclusivity. Using this lens, we strove to understand:

What still works in the PLO

What no longer works in the PLO

What PLOs need more unpacking to better reflect our definition of diversity.

The department faculty determined that the PLOs should be modified to more accurately and appropriately reflect the significance of diversity within Human Development's learning outcomes. The pre-existing PLOs are stated directly below:

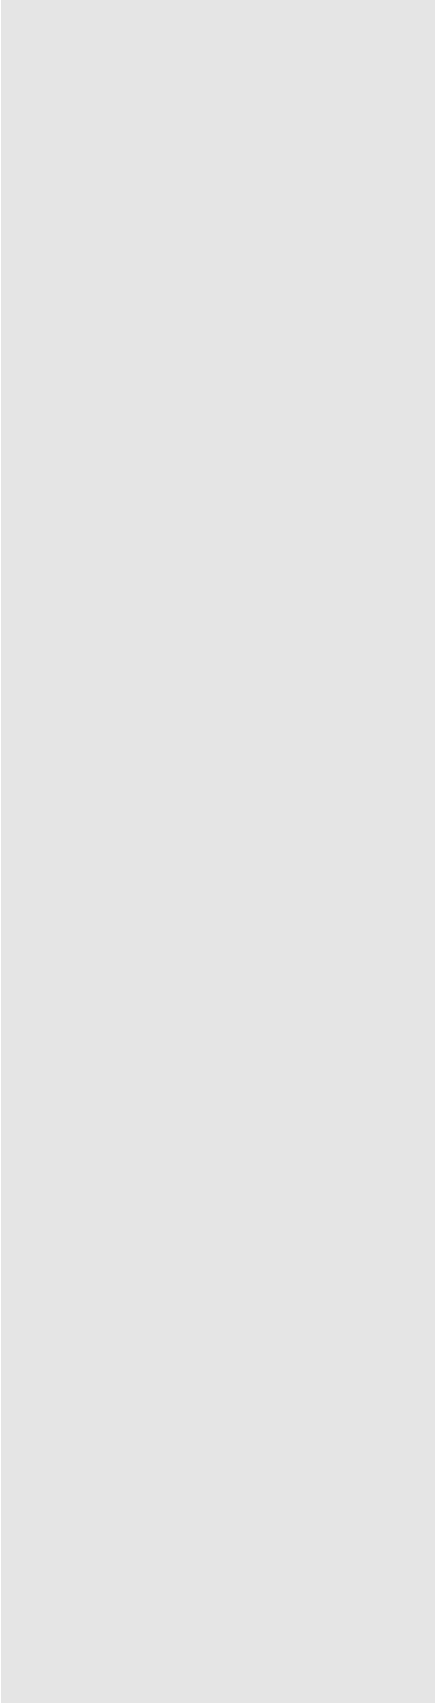

Students graduating with a B.A. in Human Development from California State University, East Bay will be able to:

1. Demonstrate core knowledge in biological, psychological, and socio-cultural aspects of human development. (ILO6)
2. Model critical thinking ability by summarizing, comparing, synthesizing, and critiquing interdisciplinary human development perspectives. (ILO1)
3. Assess information; design and conduct individual and/or group research projects, and present them clearly, logically, and persuasively. (ILO2)
4. Identify and evaluate problems by applying human development knowledge in diverse contexts. (ILO3)
5. Infer the ability to understand themselves reflectively and others empathetically. (ILO3)

After our examination, the HDEV PLOs have been modified as follows:

Students graduating with a B.A. in Human Development from California State University, East Bay will be able to:

PLO1: Demonstrate core knowledge in diverse* biological, psychological, and socio-cultural aspects of human development across the lifespan. (ILO6)

PLO3: Assess information and ethical implications; responsibly design and conduct individual and/or group research projects, and present them clearly, logically, and persuasively. (ILO2)
yes

ILO 3

HDEV 499

T3. Assess information; design and conduct individual and/or group research projects, and present them clearly, logically, and persuasively.

S

	HDEV 499
	5. Infer the ability to understand themselves reflectively and others empathetically.
	S HDE 499
	Rubric
	Qualitatively and/or quantitatively
	Department Assessment Coordinator
	Spring 2024
	Course or program refinement

	PLO1: Demonstrate core knowledge in diverse* biological, psychological, and socio-cultural aspects of human development across the lifespan. (ILO6) yes ILO 6 HDEV 499 1. Demonstrate core knowledge in biological, psychological, and socio-cultural aspects of human development. S HDE 499 Rubric Qualitatively and/or quantitatively Department Assessment Coordinator Spring 2025 Course or program refinement
--	---