

CSUH To Present 'A Chorus Line'

By Kristen Daniels
Staff Writer

The Cal State Hayward Theatre and Dance Departments' production of "A Chorus Line" opens Friday for a two-week run at the CSUH University Theatre. Tickets are $8 to $12.

"It's a great cast," said Armando Llacuna, a kinesiology major who plays Zach, the director in the show.

He auditioned for "A Chorus Line" because he had worked with Laura Ellis, one of the three directors, assisting her with a children's dance class. She thought he would be good for the show.

With very little theater experience and only a basic acting class under his belt, he wasn't sure if he should bother. But he did. At the November tryouts, he was amazed at the caliber of talent among the performers. He didn't think he would make the cut.

"Seeing my name on the final list, instead of saying 'Yay!' it was more like 'Whoa!'" he said. Then he said to himself, "I could do that."

Llacuna fully committed himself to the show. He rearranged his class schedule to accommodate the demanding rehearsal schedule, which started Jan 6.

these guys."

Aja Gianola-Bland, also in the show, is a CSUH alumna whose double major was voice and harp.

Donna Rapa-Olsen, "A Chorus Line" veteran, plays Cassie. She has done the musical seven or eight times, according to Llacuna.

The CSUH Alumni Association and Friends of the Arts will host a reception before the March 7 show and will serve a New York style deli buffet. Admission is $18 to $25.

Persons wishing information about the reception may call (510) 885-4110. Ticket information is available at (510) 885-4110.
