It previewed last spring, performed on campus in the fall, and was selected to be among 56 productions in eight KCACTF regional festivals in February.

This is only the second time a CSUEB production has reached the national stage. The first was in 1982 y jgp" Fktgevt" Gf i ct f q" Fg" Nc" Etw | " j c f" c" uk o knct" kpxkvcvkq" hqt" øQg fkrwu" Tgzlö

Written by Sam Shephard and Joseph Chaikin, the CSUEB interpretation is created and performed with a multi-racial, intergenerational, physically integrated cast of dancers, actors and musicians, with and without disabilities.

The script is a collage of views, memories and interpretations on dying, all told through stories flashing through the mind of one dying man.
